Referrals

If you refer a new client who books a regular service I would like to thank you by giving you one free service of your choice.

Summer Time

With the weather improving and the days getting hotter, please remember to take the time to test footpaths before taking your loved ones out in the middle of the day. If you can't hold the back of your hand of the footpath for 5 seconds, it's too hot for your dog to walk on, that's why we head to beaches and parks in the heat of the day, as although grass and sand is hot it's not as hot as Tarmac.

Please if you have any questions at all. Feel free to contact me directly, 0272005944 or wagsnwoofsdogcare@gmail.com

Take Note

While we are out daily we come across lots of things that are not the friendliest to our loved dogs, from broken bottles to nasty things to eat, while

Keep in mind KARAKA Berries have started dropping on the ground from trees, these are HIGHLY TOXIC to dogs so please be aware, when you are out with your dog

After the summer holiday season it is a time to be on alert for unfriendly items underfoot, broken bottles, crushed cans, and even fast food leftovers. Be mindful

When taking your loved ones to public places and be alert of the hazards. Our dogs don't have shoes to protect their pads.

A small request from me to you as responsible dog Owners, I see too many dog poos around left behind from what I can only describe as lazy owners, Now I know this isn't you, but please if you see one of these People, let's start calling them on it take the 2 seconds it takes to bag it up and Place it in a Bin. Nothing worse than standing it doggie leftovers.

Flea season

Not that the fleas ever truly stop, but with the hotter weather, it's a good reminder to keep up with the flea treatments.

Fleas usually need monthly treatments, even if you don't see obvious fleas. A female flea can lay 50 eggs per day and you can easily bring flea eggs into your home on your shoes. It is much easier to prevent a flea infestation than tackle one once it is established.

A Little bit of light Humor

Things not to say to dog owners

Some things are better left unsaid. No matter how good something might sound to you. When it comes to talking with a dog mom or dog dad. Here are some comments you should never tell a dog parent. See how many of these have been hurled your way.

That Dog Doesn't Understand What You're Saying.

I talk to my dog. Raise a paw if you are one of the millions of people who talks to their canine family member(s). I do this whether I am doing laundry, shopping in a pet-welcoming store, or driving in the car. Maybe he doesn't understand "Daddy needs a new pair of shoes" but he knows the intonation of my voice and responds with a tail wag and a tilted head; or sometimes no reaction at all. Dogs are living, breathing beings, and it is a fact that much of what we say is understood. Just ask Chaser, the dog who knows well over 1,000 words. To each their Own, and if talking to my dog bothers you then don't eavesdrop

You Have Dogs Because You Don't Have Kids, Right?

Not only is this rude, but there are millions of people who enjoy both varieties of kids: both the human and the canine types. If you are someone who chooses to have children and then look down upon me or any other millions of childless by choice folks with a sneer, think twice before you speak. We are not lesser people for not having human children. In fact, many of us feel much richer by being graced by the presence of a dog.

You Shouldn't Let that Dog Kiss You

My mouth, my face, my dog, my life: These four factors alone are all reasons why dog kisses are allowed. Yes, there is a whole scientific school of thought, and some fact, about germs and bacteria and cross contamination and zoonotic diseases. If you don't want a smooch from my pooch if I am getting a dog kiss, look away and say nothing.

Dogs Should Not Be Allowed on Furniture/Bed

To everyone whose name graces my birth certificate other than myself, I say "shhhh." According to surveys conducted almost half of dogs sleep with their owners in their owner's beds. Until you walk a mile in someone else's shoes, where their dog is allowed to reside is totally their own business. Besides, some of us sleep better, feel calm, and are generally more positive people with a dog by our side, present company included
